THE FIGHT WE HAVE STILL TO WIN

Out of the sales of world war which do not like to see a new world rise, and rise, this time, on moral foundations.

Who would not like to see a new world where there is honesty of art and decency of motive? Who would not like to find and give rather than self-seeking? Who does not want unity that will give us peace and between men and nations if they made the fight for this kind of world their common idealism?

But who will fight in this new new? And how? Haven't we tried everything? New systems of new governments? New education?
Haven't we given men more money than they would do decent when we gave them their heads? Haven't we taken their freedom back again?

We overlook, however, an experiment that has worked. We have found that men behave well when instead of tying their hands, or giving them their hands, we give them our hearts.

There are already men who who are not selfish, forces to do to do what is right, not anarchistic reasoning by the end, what they please. Nor are they half-way mid-of-the-road men who are neither the thing nor the other. They are all-out fighters for what's right, doing what is right by preference. They have found out that their heart of hearts, it is always possible to the world, which is good, and that they can't God's help, it is always possible to fail to do it.

Somebody who makes them sometimes they fail. Always they admit both difficulty and failure. Always they challenge others to the challenge of the lives they lead them.
Always they are better than than they are. Always they they seek to win men who can bring world events into their hands, and strategic as well as persistent fight. And it is always possible to win. —Pull Together Circle Press Service.
